

Tips to help your dog take Ocu-GLO Rx

1. Because the reddish-orange gelcap contents can stain fabric and carpet, it is best if you can find a creative way to have your pet swallow the Ocu-GLO Rx gelcap whole and NOT have them chew it. To help with this, you can hide the gelcap in a soft treat such as peanut butter, cream cheese, Cool-Whip, Kraft Cheez-Whiz, squirt Kraft Easy Cheese, marshmallows, or canned pet food (especially if your dog normally only eats dry food). Other suggestions: A slice of chicken/ham/turkey wrapped around the gelcap; sometimes it is best to use a VERY thin slice of meat to closely wrap around the gelcaps, such as Carl Buddig Thinly Sliced Meat. Other suggestions: braunschweiger (liver paste) and pound cake (it can be molded around the gelcap). It is best to give a small amount of the food without the gelcap first to lower your pet's suspicions (see #4 below).

2. Use Pill Pockets®, a specially formulated soft moldable treat designed to hide pills and capsules. Pill Pockets are sold by most veterinarians and pet supply stores.

3. Try giving Ocu-GLO Rx when your dog is hungry, just before mealtime. If you have multiple dogs, give them ALL treats at the time that Ocu-GLO Rx gelcaps are given, so that they are all eager to have a treat; this enhances the desire of the dog(s) being given Ocu-GLO Rx to eat the gelcaps.

4. Immediately after giving your dog the Ocu-GLO Rx gelcap, give him/her another bite of food or treat as a "bite chaser". This will help ensure that your dog has swallowed the gelcap. Another trick is to give three treats instead of two-- two "undoctored" and one "doctored" with Ocu-GLO Rx. Give an undoctored treat, then quickly give the doctored one, then quickly give the "bite chaser", so your dog is eager to swallow the second treat in order to get to the third one.

5. Professional method: Open your dog's mouth, place the gelcap as far back in the throat as possible and hold the mouth shut for a couple of seconds. This forces them to swallow, allowing the pill to go down easily. Gently blow in your dog's nose as this will cause him/her to swallow. If you are not sure how to do this, have your veterinarian's staff show you how.
